Willow Weed Books, United States, 2014. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Two lives built on lies. Two men seeking escape, fleeing the relentless pursuit of loss and regret. Jonah Hollycock and Fin Sandor were friends, shielding each other from the pain and neglect of their lives at home. But Jonah's torment was deeper than Fin's, and as a tragedy that still haunts them both took Jonah's father and sister from him, Jonah's life spiraled out of control. Arrested for robbery and assault, he was sent to prison for seven years. Now free and home again, he is working at a local factory, married, and expecting a baby. Jonah is living a seemingly ordinary life, but that is soon to change as Fin returns home to the house he grew up in. After the death of Jonah's sister, who was also Fin's girlfriend, Fin left home, coming back only once for his mother's funeral. Her house and the factory where Jonah works are now his. Outwardly successful, Fin is deeply troubled and lives an emotionally empty life. An alcoholic, he is aware that the alcohol that once soothed him is beginning to erode his defenses. He is haunted by a past he has tried to forget. Then his life takes a sudden turn when an accident leaves him badly injured and without his memory. But instead of a feeling of emptiness, Fin feels a strange compulsion to return home. The secrets that he carried with him are forgotten, but his reappearance in the small mountain town of Acropolis where he and Jonah grew up will irrevocably change their lives. Acropolis is a mix of old backwoods houses and random suburban developments, old families and shiftless...
