He was ordained an elder about 1786, in which capacity he served till his death, a period of about forty years. He died September 24th, 1826, aged eighty-four years. His wife died February 24th of the same year, aged eighty. In his will, which was executed May 9th, 1820, he shows his love for and interest in the church. He puts it among his friends, and though the times are inauspicious previous to the calling of Mr. Condit, in his bequests, first towards building the parsonage, and second towards the support of the ordinances, he manifests confidence that all will yet be bright. These hints as to his home and his relation to the church speak sufficiently distinctly for the man. To pen this in perpetuation of his memory is a privilege indeed. WILLIAM FAULKNER. William Faulkner was born August 27th, 1746. His parentage cannot be stated positively, but he was probably the son of William Faulkner, one of the early settlers of the section of county in which he had his home--between, what is now known as Franklin Square and Stony Ford, in the town of Wallkill. June 17th, 1736, James Rogers bought of Thomas Noxon, school-master, three hundred acres of land bordering on the land of Robert McCord, and among the witnesses to the delivery of the land are Israel Rogers and William Faulkner. June 1st, 1779, he married Jane Rogers, and to them were born two sons and five...
