Daphne Publications, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Psychologist and Jungian analyst Bud Harris, PhD, shares the best of his popular lectures and seminars in a concise guide that will lead you toward an authentic, satisfying life. Harris demystifies Carl Jung's classic principles regarding individuation, complexes, psychic structures, and consciousness, giving you the keys to self-knowledge and fulfillment. With thought-provoking questions and engaging exercises from his lectures and seminars, Harris helps you to clarify your understanding of your greater Self and what you seek. Drawing on examples from his own life, he explains Jungian concepts and demonstrates how you can use your own struggles to heal your soul, develop a greater sense of satisfaction, and transform your life. As Harris walks you through the process of becoming whole, he gives you the tools you need to awaken to your own potential, strengthen your personality, and become fully engaged and consciously alive. The ultimate goal is a creative transformation that energizes and empowers your life. In Becoming Whole: A Jungian Guide to Individuation, the common thread running throughout these lectures and seminars is an exploration of the dynamic process of Individuation. Professionally, the process of becoming whole is called individuation. Personally, I call it the search for Self and the search for God, or the search for whatever you might like to call the Transcendent. However you designate it, individuation is a path of awakening, transforming, becoming conscious and fully engaged in living, being authentically alive and fulfilling the unique pattern within ourselves. These Jungian lectures and seminars represent an aspect of the path of living and working that I have been following for over four decades.
