Tate Publishing Enterprises, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 2nd. 224 x 150 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. Meet Your New Best Friend shows the reader how?we are all authors of our footprints in the sand, heroes of the novels inscribed in our hearts. Everyone s life is sacred, unique, scripted high drama played out before an audience of one with but one actor on stage. The sooner we realize this the more quickly we overcome the bondage of loneliness and find true friendship with ourselves.? ? This is the favorite quote of marketing executive Eric Michael Rodts: To attempt to do for others what they best do for themselves is to weaken their resolve and diminish them as persons. The same holds true of ourselves. ? He exhorts,? Bingo! Amen! Oh, yeah! ? To have a friend you must be a friend starting with yourself. This is a simple declarative statement of a fact but is seldom observed in the manner of interpersonal cultural programming, or indeed in social intercourse in general. Too often friends are sought to enhance self-tolerance rather than self-tolerance being the magnet that attracts friends. No greater taboo exists in society than to consider oneself first and far most one s best friend. So, throwing off the chains of this illusion is difficult because there is little precedence. It is considered narcissistic and selfish when it is virtually impossible to be a true friend to anyone if that friendship is not a derivative of self-regard. We are all authors of our own footprints in the sand, heroes of the novels inscribed in our hearts. Everyone s life without exception is scripted high drama played out before an audience of one with but one actor on stage. The sooner we realize this the...
