Twice ha? the upbuilding of a city on thi3 site demonstrated its natural advantages. Within a few year? before the war Atlanta had become a bustling town of 11,000 inhabitants, and during the three years which intervened before it? destruction the place was the scat of varied and important - industries, whose principal object was to sustain the military operations of the Confederacy. It was also a depot for the distribution of sup. plies to the surrounding country and a forwarding station for the commissary department of the army. After its baptism of lire in November, 1S04, when the inhabitants had been dispersed by the exigencies of war, and of more than 1,000 houses only 300 remained, the city took a new start, and its great growth dates from that time. It is, therefore, a city of the new regime, erected on the ruins of the old. The coat of arms of Atlanta fittingly typifies this remarkable history. No city on the continent has survived such destruction. No city has twice attained prominence with such rapidity. Atlanta s foundation reaches back to the forties, and far-seeing men recognized it then as a place of promise, destined to be an important railroad center and a seat of commerce. This conception of the new city had been accepted as a true one when it was destroyed by fire, and since its new birth in reconstruction days the old spirit arose and lighted the new path of Atlanta to a...
