They are not there one second and gone the next. Flesh and bone doesn't simply reduce itself to its component atoms and become invisible to the naked eye. On the other hand, seeing is believing. Signoret was a man in his early fifties and although no more than five feet ten inches tall, was broadly built with a deep chest and powerful shoulders. He looked the Englishman directly in the eyes and in his smoker's voice, growled I think it is a matter of murder, Marti. Let me explain in more detail. You know I told you I had bought some land over to the west of the city? Well, to be precise, it was a derelict former football ground - originally home to one of several Dijon based clubs formed around the time of the first world war. The club was called Dijon Olympique and became very successful very quickly. They had on their books a player by the name of Didier Lebrun, who if playing today would be described as world class and valued in the many millions. He was a star in all senses of the word and his goals propelled the club to the top of our first division three times in succession, the last of which was the season 1923-24 - following which, Didier Lebrun disappeared. He simply vanished and not a whisper has been heard of him since - until now, that is. That's ninety-one years, Marti, ninety-one! The Cross of St Livianus was said to have been fashioned from the sword carried by the Centurion who attended the crucifixion of Jesus. It is first mentioned in...
