B-284342 training courses comply with federal regulations and national standards. The Institute reviews the grantees assessments and adds to a course catalogue the courses that satisfy the guidelines. According to an Emergency Management Institute official, all courses funded by HMEP training grants have been assessed as being consistent with OSHAs and EPAs regulations and the National Fire Protection Associations standards. In the seven states we reviewed, HMEP-funded training for responding to HMEP and Private hazardous materials emergencies and private sector-funded training Sector Training initiatives do not duplicate each other. Furthermore, duplication does not generally occur nationwide, according to national representatives of major Initiatives Generally shippers and carriers of hazardous materials. HMEP training grants Are Not Duplicative generally support training that covers the full range of hazardous materials and shipping containers and typically fund classroom-based training. In contrast, private sector-funded initiatives focus on responding to emergencies involving specific hazardous materials and the containers used to transport them. Also, these training initiatives typically are not classroom-based but are provided through other means, such as texts and videos, or feature company personnel who participate in emergency response exercises with local agencies, such as fire and police departments. HMEP grants generally pay for classroom-based response training that HMEP Grant Program teaches public sector emergency responders to respond to a variety of Supports Broad Classroom-hazardous materials emergencies. Differing levels of training address the Based Training for appropriate defensive or proactive actions required. For defensive . . . This item ships from La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
